North American Boob Tales

May 1 - 10

The beginning of May had me still in Canada finishing off my week in Brandon, Manitoba followed by a week in Winnipeg at their Solid Gold club. It was so wonderful to see everyone again! The weather was much nicer than the last time I was here (it was 50 degrees below zero the first time). I had a little more downtime than what I'm used to at a gig because my first show time each night was 10 p.m., so I was able to catch a couple of movies during the day. It was kind of strange though, going to the movies by myself. It's so difficult to find dates in a town where you don't know too many people. Back at the club I had so much fun performing, but they did have some strict rules that I can't make any contact with the customers. Luckily the bosses there allowed me to go ahead and 'do what I normally do.' That was a huge relief to me because when guys come to see my shows they want to feel my boobs against them, have some fun with them.

So I went ahead and did some boob mashing and bashing all the while getting ready for a signal from (I wasn't sure what that would be) from the managers if any 'officials' arrived at the club. The week went along without incident, but wouldn't you know it, my final show on my last night there I was on stage about one song into my show when suddenly I heard the deejay say my name in a funny tone. I looked his way, but he didn't look concerned or anything, so I continued on. After the first song I walked to the back of the stage and one of the owners was there and discreetly informed me that some officials were in the club and that I had to keep my distance from the fans until they left. Needless to say, my last show was a bit on the lame side. Of course, they stayed the rest of the night. That meant that I had to wear a bikini top for all the polaroids after my show. Sorry to disappoint the guys that stayed late, but I had to play it conservatively.

May 11 - 18

Back home I had about a week off, but really no time to relax because I had to start thinking about the Vegas Expo. Sure it's over three months away, but there are so many fittings that I really need to give my seamstress plenty of time to work. Making tops for me is quite a project. My huge curves at the bra line make it no easy task for anybody, but she's the best and is always so patient with my ever-changing boob size.

However, first things first, as I started my search for sexy material. Luckily I've had guys send me some great stuff that I'll be incorporating into this year's look. Next up was some shopping and then a stop at the seamstress for a check-up sizing. She's always amazed at how much bigger I can get and that's why super stretchy material is always the best!

May 19 - 31

Next up I was excited for my gig at Roxy's club in Brooklyn, Illinois (St. Louis, MO area). I had been to another of their clubs in the past and had a spectacular time! This was a smaller club, but comfy - and I figured it would be a fun crowd. Unfortunately the club had posted the wrong dates on their regular advertising and website and not many people knew I was there. A day or so after my gig, I started getting tons of emails from fans, who didn't even know I was there. They were frustrated! So was I! The people at the club were real nice though. I'd love to go back and next time I'll make sure everybody knows.

June 1 - 15

After a brief stop in Atlanta to close out the month of May, I was scheduled for some dances in Toronto, Canada. Little did I know, but the first day of the month would mark the day that new security measures were implemented by their government. I had no idea and wasn't prepared. Lacking all the paperwork necessary, I was put on a return flight home. All that even though I'd been there a dozen times. My apologies to everybody! I felt so bad for having to leave people hanging until I could get online and notify them of what happened. Be assured next time I'll have everything in order when I get to customs. Back in the United States I made an east coast swing for appearances in New York, Boston, and Washington D.C. Although each stop was brief, it was so much fun catching up and seeing the familiar faces along with making some new friends.

June 16 - 30

I had a few days home and was able to pick up some of my Expo outfits. My seamstress is so amazing! Some of them need a little adjusting, but for the most part they were ready to wear. She then got to work on the next bunch of outfits. I soooooo love getting new outfits! Kind of that girly thing, I guess. I brought a few with me to give them a 'test run' in Orange County, California. They were well received! To finish the month, I had a gig in Kalamazoo, MI at the club, Lil Darlings. I had a fun time! It was a beautiful club with a nice, large stage and a wonderful staff. Yaz took care of me during my stay and all the girls welcomed me with open arms. The fans were simply incredible! Their enthusiasm made my shows so exciting. I really think the adrenaline rush makes my boobs grow! Either that, or I just move around more and squeeze and bounce my tits more than usual. Works for me!
