

Chelsea's Newsletter

World's Largest Augmented Breasts

ChelseaCharms

Vol. 13 Issue 3

May/ June 2012

Giant Boobs over the pond . . . on the lakes

There is a link at the bottom to a zip file containing all images from this newsletter

May 1 - 28

May was a nice, easy going month for me. I was able to make lots of time to enjoy some time at home and being with friends. I went to some fun parties, barbeques, and even had a great road trip out of town to spend some time in Duluth up on the North Shore. Normally I get there in the late summer, so this trip was a bonus. A few friends and I had a wonderful time with some nice resort living, shopping, great food, and great memories including the construction guys that I flashed my boobs to while crossing the famous lift bridge. I think it made their day, at least I hope it did! Went by way too fast and before I knew it I did have some regular gig traveling to do, which took me to Miami, Atlanta, Houston, Boston, and Raleigh.

May 29 - June 12

I capped that off with another fabulous trip to Europe! First, a stop in London. I had scheduled this trip without knowing at first that the days would coincide with the Queen's Jubilee. It was cool to be in town for the beginning of all the festivities. I did leave right when things were really gearing up, which would have been incredible to see. Had I known while planning, I would have changed my dates to be able to take in some of this fun. While in town I was able to get out a bit and enjoy the great weather and see the sites with some friends. I was then off on a new adventure with my first time to Brussels. I had taken a train in Europe before, to Paris from London. This time, I took it from London to Brussels.

The train is such an enjoyable way to travel! It's so nice to take a break from the hectic airports and enjoy the leisurely ride by train, seeing the parts of countries I don't typically see. It's amazing how country sides can look so different. You wouldn't think that grass, trees, hills, etc. could be that way.

I was so looking forward to seeing Brussels! A whole new European city to see! But Europeans kept asking me why I'd want to go there, and I thought that was so odd. I had to ask why? It seems that some Europeans maybe don't think so highly of the place. Some said it was because it wasn't as "old" a place as others in Europe. But coming from the U.S., all of Europe seems remarkably "old" to me!

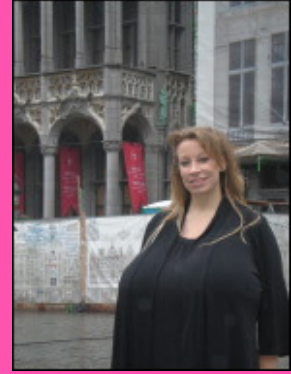

I was sure to make extra time while in Brussels to go site seeing and enjoy the city. A friend and I headed out for another great adventure. It was wet and rainy the whole time, but I wasn't about to let that stop me. I wanted to partake in some of the local fare, and enjoyed some fabulous mussels and endives, which they are apparently known for. I also learned that what Americans think are 'Belgian waffles', are nothing like the ACTUAL Belgian waffles. I have to say, I was never a fan of them, until I had a "real" one!

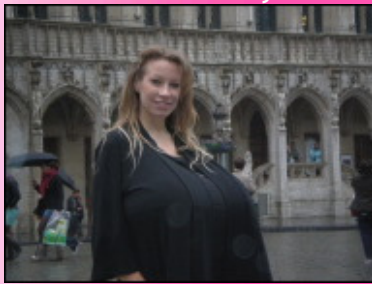

I had to go in search of the Manneken Pis, the famous fountain of the little boy peeing. I went into the beautiful, old (at least by my standards) part of town and followed the signs. A local told me that I may be disappointed once I found it, but I couldn't imagine why. Until of course, I did find it. It is actually very tiny tucked on the side of a building. I was expecting it to be in a courtyard setting, put on display of some sort, but I have to say it was rather unimpressive.

I did really enjoy the Grand-Place though. It was a gorgeous cobble-stoned area surrounded on all sides by beautiful old buildings. I also found the statues at the Parc du Cinquantenaire very magnificent.

From Brussels I went to Paris! Of course, it doesn't have to be said that Paris is an amazing, beautiful city! I didn't get much time to get out and see the sites, but I did get out and explore the neighborhood I was staying in. Upon leaving, I have to say, I saw a whole new side of Paris when I took a train to Zurich. The Paris train station I was at was a little confusing, but also full of beggars. I hadn't seen any in Paris before this, and boy, are they persistent! I had gotten there pretty early, as I know train travel is still very new for me, and I didn't want to take any chances. I befriended a baggage handler who had traveled before to the U.S. so we had some nice conversations, and he kept checking up on me from time to time, and chasing away some of the overly aggressive beggars. In Zurich, I stayed in a new area, so I had some new places there to explore. My trip to Europe just flew by! I guess it always does as trying to squeeze my big boobies in so many countries in about two weeks just isn't enough time.

Getting home, again, proved a little difficult. Like the last couple times in Europe, I experienced a flight delay when leaving for the U.S. It was a nine hour delay!!! I was absolutely exhausted by the time I got on the plane!

---

June 13 - 30

After a brief stop home I was off to the Pacers Club in San Diego. It was quite different in that they only booked me for one night. The wonderful thing about working in this industry in San Diego is that the city requires you to have a license. But it's not a simple or quick process. You have to go to the police station, a fingerprinting place AND the actual licensing center. Three stops, all in different parts of town. Gotta love it! Luckily, for this painful process, I was accompanied by a manager and we had a driver. They were a lot of fun! After all this running around, I was taken out to dinner at a very nice restaurant on the water. They also had me staying at an amazing hotel! I wanted a much longer stay. It was so luxurious! When I showed up for work, I was so pleasantly surprised! I had worked here before! But the club now had a new name and ownership. At my previous visit, it had been apart of the Hustler chain. A lot of the staff though was the same. So it was fantastic seeing everyone again!

The end of June I got to enjoy some time at home in Minnesota. I had some things to catch up on around the house, but made sure to fit in some time with friends most notably our tubing fun on the lakes. Luckily my boobs kept me afloat every time I fell off!

---

Lots of love, big tit hugs to all, Chelsea Charms

*Reproduction of this document in part or in whole in any way including, but not limited to; internet, web sites, or any publication is prohibited and considered unlawful without the prior written consent of Chelsea Charms of Charming Ventures.